So for anyone to suggest that I have nothing but compassion for him wrong! What upsets me is good men like Dick Durbin, Lane Evans and Bill Clinton have supported a woman's right to take scissors and thrust them into real live human being just because a woman flips a coin. I ~~don't~~ <sup>now</sup> believe in a free society women should not have right to take scissors to childrens. <sup>I now</sup> have never threatened anyone, only <sup>neg. DS</sup> I voiced my Opinions about the truth of partial abortion which American media was <sup>not</sup> informed people.

We won and it would have been ludicrous to say what said person

fighting this battle over 8 years

I wrote this statement of my own free will. For over 8 years, I have been making phone calls and writing letters to help promote the public knowledge that our servants and representatives have been voting to take scissors and stab them in five month old babies heads. I have never ever threatened to kill anyone. I have never said I would harm anyone. I only stated that what they have done is wrong. I do speak in a forceful language and if that women misinterpreted me, then she is mistaken. I have never and will never threaten anyone. The point of this whole conversation was that we had won the president is signing a Ban of this horrible procedure into law.

My only point in calling was to make them aware that the president and the American people, will vote representatives who want to make money off of women taking scissors and stabbing little children in the head.

Will be stopped by the law. By calls supporting life and only life. I did not and have not threatened anyone especially a Lane even who I personally [redacted] just called and said if we could get a phone number, that would be best. She suggested calling the other Congressional offices to see if they had a phone number for this guy - maybe they have caller I.D. Has this been done?

[redacted] also said if we can get an address, that would also be helpful. But she said with a phone number, she can then call Capitol Police and they can do something.

[redacted] as long as you are okay with taking [redacted] calls, then [redacted] would have his anger outlet. If you don't mind that additional stress, then so be it. Interns could immediately transfer [redacted] to your voicemail when you are out. It is truly unacceptable to have Interns listen to anyone like that.

[redacted] I would hope that you wouldn't put [redacted] onto speakerphone like those lesser out-of-control callers (unless of course your door was shut) because the rest of us shouldn't have to overhear it -- directly OR indirectly -- over the phone OR over the machine. If you really want him, he's all yours.

That being said, if he ever shows up here -- I think we should call the police. What does [redacted] want us to do?

[redacted] just an FYI on this.

I talked to [redacted] about it (maybe last week) and she played it down. She said they get those in Chicago all the time. She said we needed to explain to him that we can't have him speaking that way (which we have tried). She then said that we couldn't do much unless he made a threat against our office. I told her I didn't think he had but we would listen closely for that. She also said to try to get his contact info from him.

I'm sorry to say that I forgot to tell the interns to listen closely for threats and to try to get contact info. I think I talked to [redacted] when the interns weren't here and I forgot to tell them later.

I DID tell [redacted] that I talked to [redacted] and he said to refer [redacted] phone calls to him. I also did not tell the interns this. Oooops.

✂ This is the first time I have really felt unsafe because of a caller. I agree that we need to do something.

I request that we check into some sort of "telephone call block" for calls coming from this individual's home phone line.

Today [redacted] had taken another call from him. I have asked our two interns to give that caller to a staff person rather than try to deal with his verbal abuse on their own. Sometimes [redacted] hangs up after he has been listened to, but I truly believe that we are only enabling him by listening to him abusively rant.

I personally have patiently explained to him (on numerous occasions, of course) that if he chooses to continue using such bad language (you just name it -- he has used it) and describing graphic details (scissors jammed into babies' skulls and then, etc.), that we must end the call. He seemingly ties practically EVERYTHING he sees on TV to partial birth abortion (Bush, environment, war, etc.). This guy is (and please pardon the expression), "a wacko" bordering on "a dangerous wacko."

b7C
b7E

If this particular constituent was a person whose verbally abusive calls were infrequent, I wouldn't be asking for this. However, [redacted] has been placing multiple calls every week, so my reasons for this request are:

3/12/2003

- (1) He repeatedly uses the most vulgar words from our English language throughout his conversation ranting.
- (2) He continues to do so even after he has been politely asked not to by staff and interns.
- (3) He includes a variety of verbal abuse even when leaving his after hours machine messages.
- (4) [Where he really crossed the line for me personally was when . . .] He targets and repeatedly calls Senator Fitzgerald, President Bush, Mrs. Bush, Ashcroft, and other political leaders some of the worst names imaginable.
- (5) [redacted] seems to be an extremely angry person that doesn't want to be reasoned with.
- (6) The local phone company [and/or Springfield police] may already have some history on this person (he is not listed).
- (7) At some point, he mentioned there was another office that placed a phone block prohibiting his calls - not a surprise.
- (8) If we knew that he was calling from a local mental health institution, we'd breathe easier (knowing he probably wouldn't pop in through our office door).
- (9) He reacts impulsively reaching for his phone AS he watches television WITH his anger clearly out of hand.
- (10) Since we believe him to be a Springfield resident, he might also be dangerous if he drove over to us.

b6

b7C

At our 3 p.m. staff meeting, I will ask that we start keeping a record of his calls. [redacted] what is your advice?

Dear [Redacted]

b6
b7C

Thank you for contacting me regarding research involving human embryos. I appreciate hearing from you and would like to take this opportunity to respond.

Since 1996, the U.S. Congress has banned federal funding of research in which human embryos are harmed and destroyed. Current law (P.L. 106-113) prohibits federal agencies from conducting or supporting "research in which a human embryo or embryos are destroyed, discarded, or knowingly subjected to risk of injury or death...." Congress banned federal support for this type of research in response to the legal and ethical issues surrounding the discovery of human embryonic "stem cells."

Embryonic stem cells, which are "harvested" in vitro from days-old human embryos, are cells that some researchers believe can be stimulated to grow in many different specialized cells of the body, such as blood cells, nerve cells, and muscle cells. When researchers remove stem cells from a living human embryo, the embryo dies.

I have supported the ban on federally funded research involving the destruction of human embryos.

As you may be aware, in January 1999, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) issued a legal memorandum that concluded that the ban on federal funding of destructive human embryo research does not apply to research involving cells derived from a human embryo as long as the derivation of the human embryonic stem cells -- and the killing of the human embryo -- is carried out with private funds.

In December 1999, the National Institutes of Health (NIH), an agency within HHS that has primary responsibility for federally funded biomedical research, responded to HHS's legal opinion by issuing draft Guidelines for Research Involving Human Pluripotent Stem Cells. Under the guidelines, NIH-supported research on human embryonic stem cells could be conducted only if the cells were derived from human embryos that were created for the purpose of infertility treatment and were in excess of the clinical need of individuals seeking such treatment -- so-called "surplus" embryos. In addition, the guidelines would require that all donations of human embryos be voluntary, informed, and free of monetary inducements.

A final version of the guidelines was issued in August 2000, and NIH immediately began accepting grant applications for research projects utilizing human stem cells. According to the final guidelines, all such applications were to be reviewed by the new NIH Human Pluripotent Stem Cell Review Group, which was established to ensure compliance with the guidelines, in addition to undergoing the normal NIH peer-review process.

Upon taking office in January 2001, President Bush ordered HHS to review the NIH guidelines issued by the Clinton administration. During its review, NIH suspended its consideration of grant applications for human embryonic stem cell research.

On August 9, 2001, in a televised address to the nation, President Bush announced his administration's new policy on the use of embryonic stem cells. Under this new policy, taxpayer dollars may only be used to fund research on stem cell lines where "the life and death decision has already been made," that is, on existing stem cell lines that were derived using private funds and that were created with the informed consent of the donors -- free of financial inducements -- from embryos intended solely for reproductive purposes.

In addition, President Bush pledged $250 million towards research into alternatives to human stem cell research. In recent years, research has indicated that stem cells harvested from adults, umbilical cord blood, and human placentas, as well as stem cells derived from animals, may be able to produce benefits similar to those thought to be offered by embryonic stem cells -- without the loss of human life. According to a December 1999 NIH report, the use of adult stem cells "would certainly reduce or even avoid the practice of using stem cells that were derived from human embryos or human fetal tissue." As scientists continue their research with adult stem cells and discover more and more uses for these cells, I am hopeful that adult stem cells can replace embryonic stem cell research.

You may also be interested to hear that several bills relating to stem cell research were introduced in the 107th Congress. For example, on April 5, 2001, Senator Specter introduced the Stem Cell Research Act of 2001 (S. 723), which would have given NIH the authority to fund the derivation of stem cells from surplus embryos created in vitro. In addition, on August 3, 2001, Senator John Ensign (R-NV) introduced the Responsible Stem Cell Research Act of 2001 (S. 1349), which would have supported research into alternative stem cell sources. S. 1349 would have established a National Stem Cell Donor Bank to obtain donations of qualifying human stem cells and make the donated cells available for biomedical research and therapeutic purposes. Under S. 1349, qualifying human stem cells would have been limited to cells obtained from human placentas, umbilical cord blood, organs or tissues of a living or deceased human being who has been born, or organs or tissues of unborn human offspring who died of natural causes. Each of these bills was referred to the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions, on which I do not serve. No further action was taken on either of these bills before the 107th Congress adjourned in November 2002.

Again, thank you for contacting me. I will continue to follow this important issue with vigilance and concern and will be sure to keep your views in mind should the full Senate consider related legislation in the 108th Congress. In the meantime, please do not hesitate to let me know if you have any additional questions or comments.

Very truly yours,

Peter G. Fitzgerald
United States Senator

Dear Mr. [Redacted]

b6
b7C

Thank you for contacting my office to express your views regarding abortion. I appreciate hearing from you and would like to take this opportunity to respond.

I am pro-life. I believe that life is sacred and should be protected. I support measures to discourage and limit abortion, except in cases where a mother's life is in danger. I oppose taxpayer funding of abortions, and I support parental consent laws. I believe that the gruesome partial-birth abortion procedure should be prohibited unless necessary to save the life of the mother. I also support prohibiting the transportation of minors across state lines in circumvention of laws requiring the involvement of parents in abortion decisions, except when the abortion is necessary to save the life of the minor.

Clearly, abortion is one of the most controversial issues of our time, and there are good and decent people on both sides who can disagree. Moreover, there are measures where both sides can surely come to terms. For example, in the 106th Congress, the Senate passed the Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act of 1999 (S. 1692) by a definitive vote of 63-34 on October 21, 1999. In addition, Senator Larry Craig (R-ID) and a bipartisan group of Senators sponsored the Hope for Children Act (S. 341) in the 106th Congress to permanently extend the tax credit for adoption expenses and to adjust the limitations on such credit for inflation. On issues like partial-birth abortion, parental notification, and support for adoption and foster parenting, the nation as a whole may begin to come together.

I thank you for your interest, your comments, and for taking the time to contact me. Should you have any additional questions or comments, please feel free to contact me or visit my website at <http://fitzgerald.senate.gov>.

Very truly yours,

Peter G. Fitzgerald

REASON: Phone contacts with [REDACTED]

I have spoken to [REDACTED] on several occasions. He started calling our office back around October 2002 during the night leaving inappropriate voice mails on our answering machine. He initially never gave us his name or address but then eventually told us his name was [REDACTED] and he lived on [REDACTED]. He has spoken at some point to all 5 staff members in our office.

Every time [REDACTED] calls he uses the phrase: "scissors in baby's heads." We have tried to explain repeatedly that Congressman Shimkus is pro-life so we already support his position on anti-abortion; however, he seems to think the Congressman needs to take a more pro-active position, basically a radical one.

I have gone as far as trying to explain to [REDACTED] that his actions and comments are not helping his cause, because eventually everyone will turn a deaf ear, but he refuses to care. I suggested more positive ways of getting his message across, but he got angry and hung up on me one time.

In his conversations with our office, he has never threatened the Congressman, but he has repeatedly bashed him and spoken very harshly and rudely to all who answered the phone. We have repeatedly asked him to speak in a nicer fashion but to no avail.

Dear [REDACTED]

Thank you for contacting me regarding the issue of abortion, specifically your opposition to H.R. 4965, the Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act of 2002. I appreciate hearing from you.

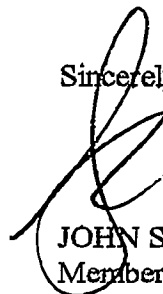

I am now, and always have been a staunch defender of the fundamental right to life. As such, I cast my votes to reflect my ongoing support for the rights of the unborn.

Consequently, I am a cosponsor of H.R. 4965. As you know, this legislation bans the procedure of partial-birth abortion, where a child is partially delivered until some portion of the fetus is outside the body of the mother. It is then killed with scissors and suction tubes, and the delivery is completed. This is a particularly barbaric form of abortion, and even many pro-choice Members of Congress have supported banning it. Most recently, H.R. 4965 passed the House of Representatives by a large margin. It had my vote and my support.

I agree that the Senate should pass it immediately without any changes. Contrary to what some believe, H.R. 4965 does indeed include an exception for those situations in which a partial-birth abortion is necessary to save the life of the mother. However, it goes on to list evidence, based on extensive medical testimony compiled during Congressional hearings, of how rarely this procedure is necessary to preserve the health of a woman. In other words, previous experience tells us that partial-birth abortions are almost never necessary to save the life of a mother; but if at some point it became necessary for some reason, it would be allowed under H.R. 4965.

Again, thank you for contacting me about this issue, and I look forward to hearing from you again in the future.

Sincerely,

JOHN SHIMKUS
Member of Congress

He advised that he did telephonically contact the office of Congressman LANE EVANS. He contacted both the Washington, D.C., office and the local office of Congressman EVANS. He advised that what precipitated these contacts was his reading an article in the newspaper regarding the passing of a partial birth abortion bill by Congress in Washington, D.C. He stated that he wanted to make his views known to Congressman EVANS, who had voted against the passing of this bill. He explained that this bill is awaiting the signature of President GEORGE BUSH and would ban partial birth abortion upon the President's signature. Inasmuch as his congressman is LANE EVANS, he decided to call Congressman EVANS to voice his concern.

He did not know how to contact Congressman EVANS so he contacted another government official; either Congressman SHIMKUS, Congressman LAHOOD, or Senator FITZGERALD. He stated that he could Congressman EVANS voted to do. He believed his conversation was two to four minutes in length and he gave his name as [REDACTED]. He stated that his conversation on the telephone was a little louder than he would normally speak. He stated he did not use any threatening words and specifically did not use the word, kill. He stated that he would never use the word, kill, even as a figure of speech. He stated that his conversation concerned his objection to Congressman EVANS voting for the bill. He stated that his contact with the Washington, D.C., office was a single phone call.

He stated that following the Washington, D.C., telephone contact, he placed a telephone call to Congressman EVANS' local office, advising the individual who answered of his same objections as described above. He believes he may have also talked to a woman in this office and again stated that he did not agree with the taking of scissors and putting them in babies' heads, which is what Congressman EVANS voted to do.

He stated that approximately five to ten minutes after making these telephone calls he received a call from an investigator asking him about threats made by him in the earlier phone call to the Washington, D.C. office. He stated that he denied making any threats and explained to him why he made the call and what he said in the call.

[REDACTED] was read the handwritten notes made by Congressman EVANS [REDACTED]. He stated that he did not use the words read to him and that they, Congressman EVANS staff, are lying. He stated that these lies are being made to get him in trouble because he is against partial birth abortion. He explained that the abortion industry is a money-maker that provides money to Congressmen.

[REDACTED] stated that the issue of partial birth abortion is something he disagrees with and feels strongly about. He stated he has written in excess of 40 letters to the editor of the local newspaper, none of which have been printed. He has been addressing this issue for eight years.

[REDACTED] was asked if he would be willing to take a polygraph exam. He stated that he believes the people working for Congressman EVANS are lying and that they should take the polygraph if he has to take a polygraph. At the conclusion of the interview, he stated that he would think about the polygraph and recontact the interviewing Agent within a week.

During the course of the interview [REDACTED] was advised that it would be a federal violation to lie to the interviewing Agents concerning this matter in the interview. He stated that he was telling the truth. [REDACTED] was given the opportunity to provide a written statement. He stated that he would like to do this. He thereafter provided a handwritten statement written by him which states the following:

"I [REDACTED] provide this statement to SA's [REDACTED] I wrote this statement of my own free will. For over 8 years I have been making phone calls and writing letters to help promote the public knowledge that our senators and representatives have been voting to take scissor and stab them in five month old babies heads. I have never ever threatened to kill anyone. I have never said I would harm anyone. I only stated that what they have done is wrong. I do speak in a forceful language, and if that woman misinterpreted me, then she is mistaken. I have never and will never threaten anyone, the point of this whole conversation was that we had won. The President is signing a ban of this horrible procedure into law. My only point in calling was to make them aware that the President and the American people will vote representatives who want to make money off of women taking scissors and stabbing little children in the head. Will be stopped by the law by calls supporting life and only life. I did not and have not threatened anyone, especially a LANE EVAN who I personally know is already sick and very ill. So for anyone to suggest that I have nothing but compassion for him wrong! What upsets me is good men like DICK DURBIN, LANE EVANS, and BILL CLINTON have supported a woman right to take scissors and thrust them into real live human being just because a woman flips a coin. I believe in a free society. Woman should not have right to take scissors to childrens' heads. I have never threatened anyone, only voiced my opinions about the truth of partial abortion which American media has not informed people. We won and it would have been ludicrous to say what said person said I said. I have been fighting this battle over 8 years without one iota of threats to any person or thing. This statement is true and correct. I

Re:

Dear Special Agent

I received your reports today concerning the allegation that [redacted] made a threat of death by wire on June, 9, 2003, while complaining about partial birth abortions.

As we discussed on the telephone, my office will decline prosecution due to lack of evidence of criminal intent (LECI), lack of investigative or prosecutive resources (LIPR) and weak or insufficient admissible evidence (WKEV). If your agency does not concur with the declination, please contact me.

Very truly yours,

JAN PAUL MILLER
